The wife of the master of ceremonies anoints him and his assistant and is in return anointed by the latter. Then she anoints the foreheads and temples of the "knowing ones" and of the neophytes.

After she has finished this work, the master of ceremonies asks the neophytes to sit down for the third part of the consecratory rites: for the name-giving or, rather, for the revelation of the name... The youngsters sit in three divisions: the makulala, makato, and woro. In each division the sibmates sit together as sidembo sa sisari.

The old man starts with the makulala and asks every youngster to give his name which he is going to carry in the future. But he addresses the question not to the youngster directly but to the youngster's assistant (the "knowing one"): "Mpora ofo, rina adeo 'nduwa ni lihja' —"What is the name which the pond left for your protégé?"

The assistant turns to his protégé and says to him: "Mpora, rina, nduwa alekuvia uvie meku — Give to the old man the name which the pond gave you!" The youngster replies: "Rina, ndzileende ko nduwa ni Ndasikoi" — "The name which I brought from the pond is Ndasikoi." The master of ceremonies now congratulates him: "Good luck to you, my son, good luck to you who came from the pond! Your wife and your child are going to call you by the name which you brought from the pond, and so will you sister and the wife of the agemate. Father and mother, however, are not going to honor you with this name: they are going to call you by the name of your childhood."

In this manner the master of ceremonies asked for the names of those in the two upper divisions. To the woro division, however, he said: "Marina hanu nduwa alesuruma, indi mutamuro ifo numa, ili mosika kiheri kja ofundo ni kikeri rina litamuro"—"The pond has preserved your names, however, you will be reminded of them later, when you reach the time of instruction (ofundo), this is the time to be reminded of the name."

After the revelation of the names the ceremony concludes with the return of the youngsters to their relatives. All the sibs with their ceremonial advisers are assembled. Each sib receives their youngsters and turns them over to the ceremonial adviser so that he may lead them 335 solemnly back to the sib territory. The song with which the Master of the Grove orders the return of the youngsters is, significantly enough, solely addressed to the women:

"Mnaha – mnaha, mtsiu, tsiu
Come and look at your beans
How well-done they are!
You, wife of the assistant (of the "knowing one"),
come and look.
You, wife of the maternal uncle, come and look:
Your beans – how well-done they are!
You, neighbor woman, come and look at your beans
How well-done they are!
You, sister, who participates in all the meals on the homestead,
Come and see your beans
How well-done they are!
I have finished my mission,
I, the old man, who knows the ancestral age.
They handed to me an unruly bull calf
In order that I deal with it (him).
I told him: 'Tradition is the ancestor of the people.'
I told him: 'Do not laugh uncouthly, like an idiot.'
Do not laugh at an old woman, do not laugh at the bark-skinned!
If you see an old man, treat him like the one who initiated you!
It's an old man like any other old man.
If you make jokes, make your jokes within your age group.
If you see an old man who is dejected by something –
Make him a better bed!
You are not anymore in your fervent years like the women's children (wanake)."
