

Return to Search

How a Hawiye tribe used to live

Author(S): Cerulli, Enrico, Biancani, Piero

Document Type: Essay

Original Page: 93

Culture (OWC): Somali \(M004\)

Region: Africa

Sub Region: Eastern Africa

Field Date: 1919-1922

Coverage Date: 1919-1922

Place Coverage

Hawiye; Somalia, Djibouti, and southeastern Ethiopia

Section Title(S)

2. The Hawiyya stirpes on the middle W[unknown]ebi.

2. The Hawiyya stirpes on the middle W[unknown]ebi.

*má ma[unknown]qlín D[unknown]arôd miséggo l[unknown]o_dônto ô
 l[unknown]o_gú murâd bêlo má ma[unknown]qlín Hawâdlä masâ[unknown]gid dist[unknown]ay ô má[unknown]qrib fyyo 'é[unknown]sa kú tukkad[unknown]ay [unknown] o_kú a[unknown]hriy[unknown]ay marrô[unknown]sin[unknown]
 de[unknown]d[unknown]dêre
 w[unknown]a_kû ma[unknown]ql[unknown]ay Bâdi 'Áddä mäygág badán
 fyyo mún damerâde
 w[unknown]a_kû ma[unknown]ql[unknown]ay
 G[unknown]al[unknown]g[unknown]aél ma[unavailable]áb mf'i gudûdan [unknown]o_máro mad[unknown]ou
 ma_ma[unknown]qlín M[unknown]ob[unknown]il[unknown]en 'Ismân Darandóllä miséggo la_gá wâye
 ma_ma[unknown]qlín D[unknown]uûd nimán sam[unknown]a máro mad[unknown]ou â márti ku_s[unknown]oráye
 ma_ma[unknown]qlín M[unknown]irwâ[unknown]q ad[unknown]eró Hilli[unknown]bi â wu[unknown]hû máya yiri midígta la_gá
 m[unknown]el[unknown]aye
 Murúsada wa[unknown]hán ku_na'áy kuâs m[unknown]jordi tá'ab wâye
 w[unknown]a_ku ma[unknown]ql[unknown]ay Maytiráda Gäl[unknown]adi
 rêr Mâmo Sûbis
 Masâib man[unknown]ay [unknown]da'dó: m[unknown]el [unknown]dêr
 ma_gâro
 ê m[unknown]ink[unknown]ay ma_kôyto.*

539
Literary Texts

I have never heard that somebody went in search of durra from the D[unknown]ar[unknown]od /Daarood/ and had [thus] desired it in vain (¹):

I have never heard that a [unknown]Hawâdlä had built a mosque and prayed in it the prayers of the sunset and of the evening

94 and read the long suras (²).

I heard you, O B[unknown]adi 'Addä: many people and male donkeys (³).

I heard you, O G[unknown]al[unknown]gä'él: notables with red canines and black robes (⁴).

I have never heard that someone has not found durra among the Darandóllä 'Ismân M[unknown]ob[unknown]il[unknown]en (⁵).

95 I have never heard that the D[unknown]a[unknown]ud, good people, have welcomed the guests with black clothes (⁶).

263 I have never heard it said about the Mirwâ[unknown]q, sons of the uncle Hilli[unknown]bi, that from anything about which they said no! their right hand was withdrawn (¹).

The Murusada, I hate them: those who are cultivators of red durra (mordi) (²).

I heard you, O Maytirada Gälädi, people of Mâmo Sûbis:

If there is a brawl: "I do not feel like going to a far place; are you coming to my house (³)?"

101
Identification

131
Location

181
Ethos

186
Cultural Identity And Pride

231
Domesticated Animals

241
Tillage

243
Cereal Agriculture

515
Personal Hygiene

522
Humor

539
Literary Texts

574
Visiting And Hospitality

578
Ingroup Antagonisms

619
Tribe And Nation

771
General Character Of Religion

101
Identification

131
Location

181
Ethos

186
Cultural Identity And Pride

231
Domesticated Animals

241
Tillage

243
Cereal Agriculture

515
Personal Hygiene

522
Humor

539
Literary Texts

574
Visiting And Hospitality

578
Ingroup Antagonisms

619
Tribe And Nation

771
General Character Of Religion

- . The poet, before considering the Hawiyya peoples of the middle W[unknown]ebi, turns to the D[unknown]ar[unknown]od tribes (of Northern Somalia), pastoralists living in the desert zones in which cultivations of cereals are not possible, but which give food and wealth to the Hawiyya living near the river.
- . The poet now begins to mock the [unknown]Haw[unknown]adlä tribe (belonging to the Hawiyya) for its presumed lack of religion.
- . The B[unknown]adi 'Addä, on the W[unknown]ebi to the north of the [unknown] Haw[unknown]adlä, extending with their Makanne free as far as the Ethiopian border, riverside residents of the river and a numerous tribe, have, according to the singer, more donkeys as beasts of burden than camels.
- . The G[unknown]al-[unknown]gä'el, also these Hawiyya, neighbors of the B[unknown]adi 'Addä toward the west, nomadic pastoralists in the 'red land' ('arro gud[unknown]ud') of the woodland of acacias, have -- according to the irony of the poet -- unclean clothes and teeth. The cleanness of the teeth, obtained by means of the use of the 'ad[unknown]ay' toothpicks (Salvadora persica), is a real preoccupation of the Somali pastoralists. This presumed negligence is thus particularly condemned by the poet.
- . To the M[unknown]obil[unknown]en, on the other hand, relentless cultivators, the singer gives praise because of their abundant crops.
- . The D[unknown]a[unknown]ud, to the south of the M[unknown]obil[unknown]en, in the zone to the west of the W[unknown]ebi, are praised because of their cordial hospitality.
- . The Hilli[unknown]bi, neighbors of the D[unknown]a[unknown]ud are, according to the singer, particularly stubborn, and, therefore, if they refuse something, there is no way to induce them to give it.
- . The Murúsada, farther to the south than the Hilli[unknown]bi, cultivate the red durra, which is worth less than the white.

. Thus the review of the peoples of the middle W[unknown]ebi is concluded by joking about the peaceful homely humor of those of Gälädi (on the bank opposite Afg[unknown]oy, immediately to the north of Mogadiscio), who avoid fights and shut themselves in the house. The beginning of the review, as we have seen, was preceded by a joke about the D[unknown]ar[unknown]od of the north; the end is concluded with a joke about the Gälädi, who are one of the Digil peoples. The middle stanzas are all devoted to Hawiyya tribes: [unknown] Haw[unknown]adlä, B[unknown]adi 'Addä, G[unknown]al-[unknown]gä'el, M[unknown]obil[unknown]en, D[unknown]a[unknown]ub, Hilli[unknown]bi, Murúsada. The last hemistich (minkäy ma koyto) imitates the dialect of the G[unknown]alädi.

This poem too, like the 'contrast' between Ya[unknown]q[unknown]ub and 'Am[unknown]udi that we published above, gave rise (in 1915) to a very violent reaction against the singer (who was a D[unknown]a[unknown]ud); and, what may appear more unexpected, precisely from the side of the D[unknown]ar[unknown]od of Mogadiscio, definitely less badly treated than the others in these verses, but considering the declaration of poverty given to them a serious offense. On the other hand, it was very rare that these poems of 'vaunt' for and against the various tribes did not provoke quarrels and arguments or even brawls.

Human Relations Area Files

755 Prospect Street

New Haven, CT 06511

General Inquiries: ✉ hraf@yale.edu

Issues and Bugs: ✉ hraf-support@yale.edu

