A joke I had occasion to hear a number of times may illustrate this. Especially in my first several months in Idaw Tanan, when I was confronted with a number of men I did not know, seated about a room, for example, I would inquire discreetly of whomever was seated next to me whether certain ones who seemed to be dominating the conversation might not be im[unknown]aren. Invariably, my question was announced to the assembly and the comment made that "no, he isne isn't an am[unknown]ar, but he wants to be one".
