Section Title(S)

The Homonymous Method of Applying Kin Terms to Consanguineous Kin and Affines

Ego's relatives for whom his younger relatives may be named fall into five categories:

(1) ego's parents and offspring

(2) ego's siblings

(3) ego and his spouse

(4) other kin

(5) affines

Kinship Terminology

(1) Parents and offspring. Some of ego's nephews and nieces would be named for ego's parents. His brothers, for instance, would name their firstborn sons and daughters for the children's FaFa or FaMo (i.e. the parents of ego and his brothers). Some of ego's cousins might also be named for ego's parents. Some of ego's grandchildren might be named for his sons and daughters. The terms ba and tai, !ha and khai*, as I have said, are used only for the biological parents and offspring. The generational terms which have the same generational association and joking status as the terms for parents and offspring are tsu and //ga, and these are the terms ego uses for relatives named for his parents and offspring.

In some instances, the terms applied by the homonymous method turn out to be the same as those which would be applied by the generational method. This is true of the terms applied to the nephews and nieces named for ego's parents; tsu and //ga are the terms used according to both methods in these instances. Cousins would be termed !gun!a or tũn by the generational method; however, if they are named for ego's parents, the terms applied must be tsu or //ga .		553 Naming 601 Kinship Terminology

(2) Siblings. If a relative is named for ego's sibling, ego applies sibling terms to the relative, and ego has the same joking position with him that he would have with his sibling.		553 Naming 601 Kinship Terminology
(3) Ego and his spouse. Relatives may be named for ego and his spouse. !Gun!a is the term used for a male named for himself; but the term would be in its diminutive form, !guma . A male named for ego would be younger than ego. That male would reciprocate by calling ego !gun!a .		553 Naming 601 Kinship Terminology
