Whenever joking is institutionalized in a ritual context, the duty is performed by 'grandchildren'. These are never the grandchildren of the lineage involved; they are grandchildren of the silufulo lineage. During a funeral grain from the store of the dead man or woman is poured upon the grave. The grandchildren of  181 the silufulo lineage are the ones to scramble for it while they jest with one another and with lineage mates of the dead. This permits the latter to eat of the grain. In Middle River region, this duty falls to clan joking-partners.
