

Return to Search

A Twi relationship system

Author(S): Mead, Margaret

Document Type: Article

Original Page: 303

Culture (OWC): Akan \(FE12\)

Region: Africa

Sub Region: Western Africa

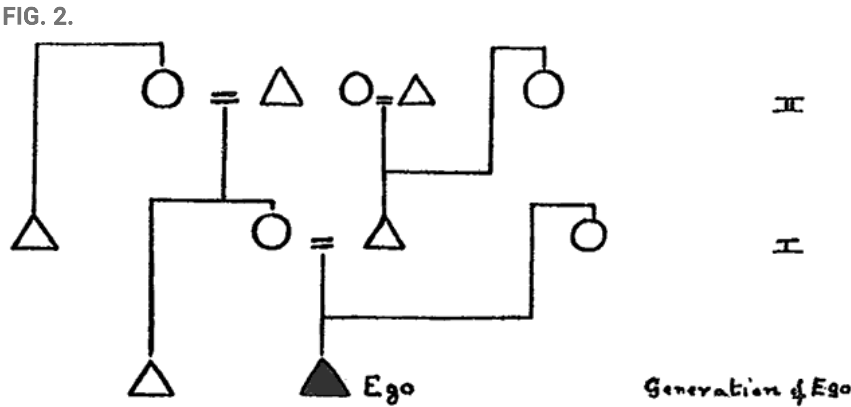

Field Date: 1925

Coverage Date: 1925

Place Coverage: Not Specified

Section Title(S)

ADDITIONAL NOTES ON TWI USAGE. • AFFINITY TERMS USED BY BOTH SEXES.

601
Kinship Terminology

A comparison of the tables of consanguinity and affinity of these Twi and Ashanti systems affords a most interesting instance of the way two peoples have taken the same basic kinship terminology and bent it to their peculiar uses. The terms are the same, the usages of every-day speech are practically the same, and yet a close analysis of the strict usage of each system reveals

184
Cultural Participation

601
Kinship Terminology

a fundamental difference in preoccupation, a widely divergent although not completely antithetical emphasis.

ADDITIONAL NOTES ON TWI USAGE.¹

According to our informant, the terms nana for elders and ba for those individuals considerably younger than the speaker were in general use. Wofa and osewa, for mother's brother and father's sister and adya and ena for father and father's brother, mother and mother's sisters, etc., were used as terms of address. Where, however, a member of one of these two latter categories was younger than the speaker, personal names were used instead. Names were used entirely between members of the same generation.

601
Kinship Terminology

Okrafo, not strictly a relationship term, is used between the two wives of one husband, and also between the wife of a nephew and the wife of his maternal uncle.

601
Kinship Terminology

Joking and chaffing are permitted between brothers and sisters, between a man and his wife's sister, and between a woman and her husband's brother.

602
Kin Relationships

¹ These scattered notes are included for what they may be worth. They were collected incidentally, upon the record of only one informant, and could not be checked as thoroughly as could the relationship terms.

Human Relations Area Files

755 Prospect Street

New Haven, CT 06511

General Inquiries: ✉ hraf@yale.edu

Issues and Bugs: ✉ hraf-support@yale.edu

Terms and Conditions · Accessibility · Cookie Policy