G. Interethnic Contacts Between Age Groups

Formalized interethnic contacts between age groups do not exist in Yauri. However, there are some traditional patterns of interaction that exist on a relatively informal level. For example, Kamberi and Dukawa males traditionally socialize with one another along age lines. They have a very well-developed joking relationship with one another. Since it is highly improper in both groups for juniors to joke with seniors, joking between groups follows age lines also. It may well be -93- that age grades formed segments of the warrior organization, since the Kamberi and Dukawa were allies in frequent past disturbances, and the joking relationships may reflect the old organization.
